R. D. Blackmore lives in great retirement at his pretty villa residence, "Shortwood," close to Teddington station, which latter place, by the way, is an innovation not at all to the taste of the veteran novelist, who built his home before the station existed, and now regrets its proximity. Mr. Blackmore's hobby is his garden. In front there is a trimly kept lawn, surrounded by flour-ishing beds where rhododendrons, picotees, roses of every hue and old fashioned country flowers vie with each other in abundance. Behind is the fruitful orchard, his great pride, where strawberries, currants, stone fruits, pears and apples are to be found in such plenty that much of it is sold in the fruit mar-

It has always been Mr. Blackmore's custom to work a few hours daily in his garden, and this seems to be his favorite recreation. Mr. Blackmore is now over 70 years of age, and a widower. His two nieces reside with him. In figure he is rather short and thick set, with white hair and whiskers; his face is strongly lined, and the blue eyes and bushy eyebrows are very characteristic. He re-minds one somewhat of "Uncle Corny" in his latest work, "Kit Kitty," the hero of which, strangely enough, is a market gardener living at one of the river villages a little higher up than Teddington. -Toronto Mail.

Senators and Flowers.

Senator Teller has one of the prettiest gardens in the northwest. And oh! what stories the roses could tell there! The senator's favorite relaxation all summer is to pay diligent attention to his flower beds.

Constituents, caucus managers and other gentlemen who want to whisper little suggestions in the senator's ear find him every evening armed with a hose sprinkler going around among the flowers, and as they talk they follow him around from bush to bush. They might not get all they want, but the senator has pleasure and relaxation from his garden work, and boasts the prettiest kept lawn and flower beds in his neighborhood.

Senator Evarts has a nice garden, but he does not deserve any special mention for it. It is Mrs. Evarts' particular care and pride to spend her mornings weeding the beds, and when the senator and herself sit down for their after dinner talk they get a great deal of pleasure from viewing the bright blossoms all around the windows .- Washington Lot-

Kitchen Floors.

Kitchen floors will be kept in good condition for two years, says a Good Housekeeping correspondent, if equal parts of Vandyke brown and burnt slenns are added to the oil. These may be had ground in oil and put up in one pound cans. The shade may be regulated to suit the fancy. This is preferable to paint and impervious to "spots" Clean the floor with clear, moderately hot water; no soap.

To make an apple pudding which is sure to receive praise from all who try it peel, quarter one dozen rich apples, stew them in a small stew par, until tender, then work them through a fine sieve. To one cupful of sugar add one teaspoonful of ground cinnamon, the grated rind of one lemon, one egg and a third of a cunful of butter; beat well into the apples, pour into the paste and bake slowly sequently They Were So Busily En gaged They Passel Their Station. There was an amusing and instructive scene the other day in an uptown train on the Sixth avenue elevated. At Park place a handsome young couple, evidently very much in love, got on one of the middle cars, and settling down in a cross seat they proceeded without delay to be come absorbed in one another, not pay ing the slightest heed to any one else in the car. All the passengers watched them with good natured interest, even the small boy in the corner, who had been deeply absorbed in the delights of a tuppenny dreadful.

Station after station flew by, all unheeded as far as the lovemakers were concerned, and the st alwart Adonis' arm had just settled comfortably about the waist of his demure companion when she suddenly gave a little feminine shrick and made a frantic break for the door. Everybody was startled, no one more than the young man, who instinctively attempted to hold her back. But she only jerked herself away, and the onlookers could see that the expression of undying love on her features had given way to a look of the most prononnced vexation as she turned on her companion with the remark:

"Now, I knew you'd do it. And I was so anxious to be on time. Don't make matters worse by ritting there, but let us get off before we are carried any fur-

"But this isn't our station," expostulated the young man in astonishment. "I know it isn't. We are far beyond We should have gotten off at Fifty-

There it was, sure enough: but even work, in small family. Apply at that N. Toas everyone looked, and the young man started hastily to gather up some dles that were on the seat beside him, the train started, and a change came over the expression of the bride-for a bride she certainly was. From a vexations flush, the color on her face changed to a dark crimson blush of embarrassment, which grew deeper as the unfeeling wretch by her side burst into a loud laugh, in which all the passengers joined. The bride didn't say another word, but simply made her way hurriedly into the forward car, followed closely by her sturdy companion, who was trying in vain to look serious. The little woman had been fooled by the mirror between the seats, which reflecting the station sign from the platform, had turned the figures around, making 81 out of 18 .-New York Star.

A Brave Little Beauty.

Mayor Cushing's little 5-year-old daughter Blauche fell from a hammock and broke her shoulder. After the fall she ran into the house, her lips clenched tightly, and calmly told her mother that she had hurt herself. Although not a tear was visible, yet the deathly pallor which had spread over her face told the mother that her little one was hurt. "Now, mamma, don't you cry. I will stand the pain. It won't last so very long," said the little one. Hastily examining his child, Mr. Cushing found that the shoulder blade was broken. Surgeons were immediately brought, and the fracture, which proved to be a serious one, was quickly set. At no time during the fearfully painful operation did the little one utter so much as a moan. She simply clenched her dainty little fists, bit her lips, and which the attending physician afterward remarked they had never seen equaled,
